STUDENTS RALLY AGAIN

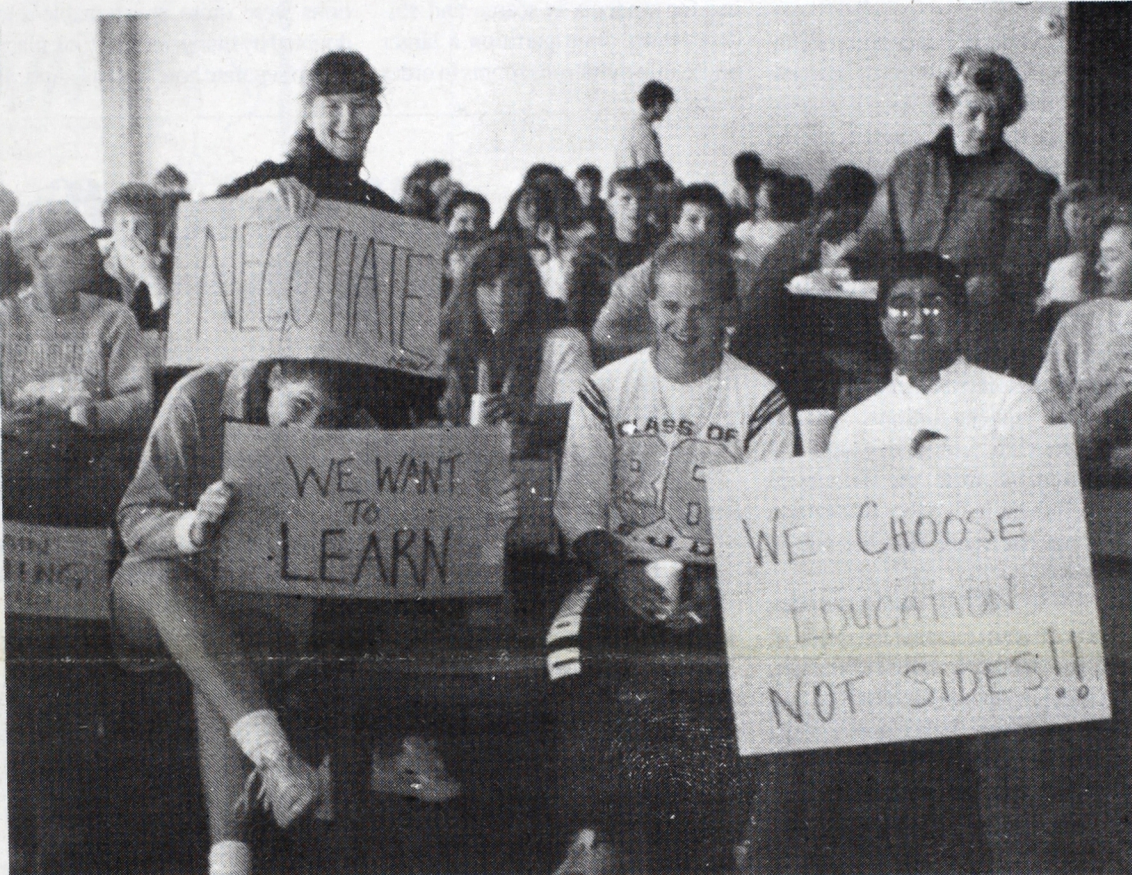

By Steve Lewis
News Director

A call for the resignation of President Belanger was cried out from the mob of three to four hundred students at the second student rally held Tuesday in the Great Hall.

Following an informal motion from one student asking for the resignation, the proposition was seconded by more than half of the students in the hall. Because of the students' request, SGA president Brent Bostrom officially asked for Dr. Belanger's resignation.

Some of the listeners warned the gathers to rethink their actions and argued that taking such drastic actions were not the answer. Bostrom again sided with the majority in the matter, but after the rally in an interview with the media, Bostrom displayed strong reservations about Dr. Belanger resigning. Bostrom did say that whatever happens, students must stand together.

In order to stand together, students asked that they be told the position of the SGA. Bostrom declined to give an exact position, but said that every policy implemented by SGA during the strike has come against the administration.

To speak for the administration were Jack Porter from the registrar's office and Marian Croff from continuing education. Mr. Porter said that as of now, the year would not be extended but gave warning that if the strike continued longer, the year might be extended. He also said that the first term might be reduced to only 12 weeks.

Mr. Porter also said that exam periods may be lowered from 13 to 6 days. Some were concerned about this being too much for the students to handle, but Mr. Porter convinced everyone that the administration cares.

Students were not convinced. Bostrom said to really get actions they must all get involved. Bostrom encouraged a "student picket" at the corner of Ramsey Lake Rd. and Paris St.

He also suggested taking legal actions and a student fee withdrawal. Bostrom again urged students to get involved because student unity is their only power.

A REAL MARCH AT LAST

by Rick Marshall

When Tuesday's rally ended the march began. Approximately 400 concerned students took action to get attention to their plight.

As students walked and drove to Paris Street, traffic heading away from the university along Paris Street was effectively blocked. As the march progressed along Ramsey Lake Road, students who were heading back to the university parked their cars and joined in the march.

When the marching students reached the intersection of Paris St. and Ramsey Lake Rd. they cheered after seeing some students already there. As the two groups joined and started picketing, sporadic cheers went up as more students joined in on the picketing.

Originally the plan was to hold up traffic along Paris St. by forming an information picket. The police however had other ideas. By detouring traffic over to Regent St. the pickets were rendered useless and the flow of traffic dried up. To counter this move, SGA president Brent Bostrom headed the picketers up the Paris St. hill towards York St.

Once the students reached York St. Bostrom asked the cheering mob if they wanted to go downtown. With a resounding voice of approval the students occupying all 4 lanes and the median headed downtown. People who were caught in the traffic jam didn't seem to be overly upset. In fact upon students request, many supported the marchers by honking their horns and offering encouraging gestures and words.

The march broke up after reaching downtown and Bostrom spoke a few words to the mob of students and offered them hot chocolate "on the house".

The Sudbury Regional Police should be and were congratulated for the efforts in allowing the peaceful march to continue. They also prevented any angry motorists from endangering the students.

This rally shows there is strength in numbers. As of this writing a group of students headed up by Chris Letang are planing to camp out in front of the university until the strike is over. The SGA is presently organizing a march on Queen's Park call the SGA office for details.

MARCHERS DETAINED

by Gib McInnis

Judy Edmonson, Rick White, and A.E.F. President Jean Dennie were detained by Sudbury Regional Police for a short time after the student march on September 20.

The problem was that the organizers of the march did not obtain the proper authority to protest on the Civic Square concourse at City Hall. They were legally allowed to march on the streets, but R.J. Keir, chairman of the Sudbury regional department at City Hall, said the protesters simply did not follow correct procedures to protest on the concourse. However they did follow proper verbal procedures from the police department and had consent from the security officer at the municipal office. Due to a misunderstanding upon the security officer's part, proper written authority was not followed through. Keir mentioned the only reason why his department was upset was because he was not aware of how many students were going to be there. "For all I know there could have been 8,000 students marching across the square," he stated, and added that this could have been a danger to other citizens in the square at the time. The three were not arrested, however, but only warned to follow proper procedures in case of another march.

Police question students.

The march was supported by about 30 students and three professors and began at Laurentian's V.I.P. square at 11a.m.. The protesters continued down Ramsey Lake Road then turned on Paris and headed downtown before ending up at Civic Square.

CAUGHT CHEATING

by Gib McInnis

Two students have been suspended for one semester due to the fact that they were caught cheating on the Language Competency Test.

It started when one student hired another student to write the test. Later at a party, he boasted to friends that he had hired another student to write his test. A concerned individual overheard his remarks and later called the Dean of Humanities, John Gonder.

Gonder took action by comparing the forged competency test with a previous factual final exam written by the accused student. The result was two different styles of handwriting. Gonder then arranged a meeting with the accused student, along with Dr. Mike Dewson, then the Dean of Social Sciences, and Dr. Charles Belanger, then the Vice-President of Laurentian. The result of the meeting was the identification of the student who was hired to write the test. Both students did finally admit to cheating and were summarily suspended for one semester.

The cheating process was easily accomplished because there was no formal check of identification. We are assigned a student number along with our name, but these can be easily traded, as this example clearly indicates.

This policy, however, will change according to Dean Gonder, but "it is unfortunate that the University has to stiffen its policy because of a few individuals cheating against the system." For future language tests, students will have to provide picture I.D. to be admitted to the test.

OFS WORKS FOR STUDENTS

The Ontario Federation of Students (OFS) is an organization that acts as a liaison between student needs and the government. Over 200,000 university and college students in Ontario are represented by the OFS. Recently, OFS chairperson Edith Garneau and Greg Elmer were anxious to communicate Ontario students' needs to the government. They will be meeting with Mr. Conway monthly to insure that the key decision making people are aware of the Ontario students concerns.

The Ontario Federation of Students' '89-90 manifesto encompasses many far-reaching demands, such as that government should curtail post-secondary cutbacks. Ten years ago, six percent of all provincial government expenditures were spent of post-secondary education. This year, only 4.6 percent was allocated for universities and colleges. This underfunding has the potential to increase student/teacher ratios and increase student tuitions. Due to this, the OFS will be demanding a commitment from the Provincial Government in October that tuition fees not rise more than the rate of inflation.

The OFS is concerned that O.S.A.P. is not meeting the needs of the students in a realistic manner. Of special concern are disabled students and their higher than normal expenses. The number of international students in Ontario universities has declined considerably since OFS will be held in Toronto on October 22-25. It will give the OFS a chance to talk with M.P.P.'s and cabinet ministers in order to make their concerns for future students needs known.

The OFS is also active in petitioning for better rail services for students and ensuring that services in passenger rail will not be reduced. The OFS successfully campaigned against a housing by-law in Toronto that made it illegal for more than four unrelated people to live in the same home. Since affordable housing for students is scarce and students must often partition a larger house into numerous rooms in order to generate affordable housing; the by-law was an obstacle that the OFS was able to successfully deal with.

Laurentian University has a permanent OFS fieldworker who can be contacted for more information about the OFS. His name is Carl Hetu and he can be found in the S.G.A. office.

NEGOTIATING?

by Tricialynn Morgan

Last Thursday morning, a mediator was brought in from Toronto, and negotiations began that morning.

The success of those negotiations were quite questionable and doubted by many, as they took place in two separate hotel rooms. And, as a result an attempt to mediate talks by Fred Long was carried out by means of phone only - definitely not an effective method by any means.

This past weekend, for reasons not understandable, talks broke off altogether.

This time last weekend, there was hope that classes would begin the following Monday. However, as has happened for three weeks now our hope as students is beyond being replenished.

Unless we as students, demand that both Administration and LUFA agree to binding arbitration, it is quite possible indeed, that we may lose our school year altogether.

We can't allow that to happen.

We have to make sure, that such a situation does not happen no matter what the reasons may be.

The onus is on us, as a student body, and only us.

All we're offering is the world.

You're about to receive your degree - you're probably feeling proud of yourself. We're proud of you, too. But when you come back to earth consider this.

Touche Ross has been around the world. Worked around the world. Gained respect around the world. And established offices around the world.

In fact, Touche Ross Canada, as a founding member of Touche Ross International, has provided the opportunity for international experience and travel to most partners and staff. Many have taken advantage of these opportunities and all we get for updates are postcards and pictures.

FANTASTIC FANTASTICS

by Steve Madison

The Sudbury Theatre Company kicks off its 1989-90 season with a highly enjoyable play. The Fantastics is the first of seven plays this season. It is not just your typical boy meets girl love story. It's a clear, refreshing look at an eternal storyline. The first act is a naive fairytale interspersed with biting wit and cliché. We view the boy and girls' fantasy filled ideals as they mature from fluff to real-life experience.

The cast was extremely strong and professional. The two fathers are marvelously portrayed by Bruce Parkhouse and Kelly Handerek. The story unfolded beautifully and completely in a most enjoyable manner. The entire production was a treat to behold. In case you hadn't noticed, I enjoyed myself immensely and I'm looking forward to a successful season for the Sudbury Theatre Centre.

POOR BEN

Ben Johnson, he was the centre-piece of the 1988 Seoul Olympics, but for all the wrong reasons.

What was seemingly a moment of purest gold, tarnished when he was asked to give back his medal; his glory, his life's achievement, as a result of anabolic steroid use, which oozed into news and sports commentators hands just three days after his race.

Sunday night, I managed to catch a portion of a sports special entitled "September To Remember", and I was quite disappointed. What was supposed to be highlights of the Seoul Olympics in 1988, soon turned into highlights of the rise and fall of Ben's track career.

After such a long period of time, I had hoped that we as Canadians, would in time forget this and stop the harassment towards Ben, both publicly and privately. But, obviously we have not matured to such levels, as many are continuing to view Ben as a so-called fallen hero.

True, he was Canada's legend. He dared us to dream, tempted us to achieve, and paved the way so many of us may do so, then let us down. However, he is still, my eyes one of Canada's finest. He spent the better part of competition and training his body to be a machine, so we as Canadians could take credit for having "the fastest man in the world."

I truly believe that we should demand less of our athletes and place more value on their human effort and not concentrate on the colour of medal one might win.

Ben has suffered enough already, and it is he and he alone who must now live with his mistake. Sure, we expressed our disbelief and our shame to be Canadians, but I also believe that we are partly responsible for pushing our athletes to such levels and regarding them as machines.

Ben made us proud to be Canadians and at the same time, we also experienced shame to say we were of Canadian decent.

Its been over a year now, so lets bury the hatchet towards Ben Johnson.

He made a mistake, so what? We all do. However, he, unlike many of us has done more with his life regardless.

Ben is still one of our greatest athletes, and I agree with gold medalist sprinter, Florence Griffith-Joyner when she says most confidently that Ben is our best athlete in terms of sprinters. And regardless of what drugs he did or didn't take, Ben will remain a hero for years to come and will prove so in future Olympic.

Ben Johnson is still a hero, and perhaps more wiser of a man, as he has learned the hard way that glory plays no favorites.

If sports commentators are to highlight the glory of olympics games and competition in sport, then they should do just that, highlight one's glory, not one's mistakes.

Stop reducing them from man machine.

LETTERS SECTION

DEAR PIERRE

DEAR EDITOR,

Students fed up with the strike and disillusioned by the slow progress of talks between the faculty association and the administration staged a protest march and an informal question and answer period for the public on Wednesday.

Approximately 30 hearty demonstrators turned out for the five kilometre trek which took them through the university grounds, past the striking professors and on to Memorial Park. Carrying placards of protest and chanting anti-strike slogans, the students were urged on by striking professors as well as passerby. The march continued on to Memorial Park where a question and answer period was conducted.

Judy Edmonson, a second year psychology student and one of the organizers explained that the strike first and foremost is affecting the students. "The professors and administration are supposed to be intelligent and reasonable people, so why can't they come to a reasonably intelligent settlement? We are the ones whose time and money are 'being wasted'.

Edmonson was further frustrated by the stance taken by the administration which refused to sanction or participate in a public forum after the march. "We had the support of the SGA, the AEF, and the professors but the administration refused to participate unless they had a total news blackout."

Many of the protesters expressed anger that there is a general lack of communication offered to students to keep them informed of the progresses taking place between both sides. "No one asks for our input" said one marcher. "We hear nothing and can say nothing. I think that Daniel should get off his but and start earning some of that $134 000 that WE pay him!"

The organizers were generally pleased with the march in that it focused attention on the difficulties facing the students as a result of the strike. It also let them blow off some steam and hopefully pressure the two sides to come to a quick and fair resolution to the strike.

As one student put it "All we want is to go back to school." Amen to that.

Dear Pierre;

I am to embarrassed to ask my friends, so I'm writing to ask you.

I am in my second year at Laurentian and unless I offer to pay, I can't seem to get a date. As I've been told I am a cute girl of 19 years. I find this situation to be most frustrating.

So where do you, Pierre, think a nice, cute girl should go to meet a nice guy and get a date?

Signed, Frustrated.

Dear Frustrated, I'm stumped. See a chaplain.

Signed, Pierre.

Dear Pierre;

I'm wondering as usual, I still like my old boyfriend, we talked on the phone last week for over an hour and I think he still likes me too! Should I date him again or not? We did have great times together and I really miss him.

Signed, Chief.

Dear Chief;

Do you believe in fate, or destiny? Perhaps this is meant to be after all, there's only one way to find out. I suggest you go for it. If it doesn't work out, remember, there's other fish in the sea, you just have to learn how to swim better.

Signed, Pierre.

Dear Pierre,

My sense of time is gone. I seem to keep fading in and out of what most people perceive as normal time progression.

Unfortunately, my "time-slips" are only into the past. This cheats me out of gambling on up-coming sporting events and forces me to plod away at school in an attempt to eke out a future existence.

I really must question the value of educating myself and planning for the future when most of my time is spent in the past. What do you think I should do?

Signed, "When Am I?"

Dear "When Am I?"

By now you should know that I already answered your question last week.

Signed, Pierre.

Dear Pierre;

I'm a fourth year history student, popular with the profs, but just hitting bottom with the girls. I was doing alright until the rumour got out that my mother irons my underwear. What should I do to rectify the situation?

Signed, Desperate.

Dear Desperate; Don't buy starch!

Signed, Pierre.

Last year Pierre helped many distraught, depressed, and perplexed individuals sort out their problems and down their anxieties about love, life, and everything in between.

This year Pierre promises to do even better. He hopes you enjoy his letters and assures you he will do his best to sincerely help you.

Pierre welcomes all your letters, and any kind of problem you may have, assuring he will ease your conscience lessen your guilts, and help you conquer your fears.

If you think this issue's letters are great, look forward to Pierre's return next week with even more juicy tidbits.

END OF SUMMER?... NEVER

by Bruce Campbell

Amidst the chaos at Laurentian University, the physical education students completed outdoor schools 1, 2, & 3 while our profs walked the picket lines.

At outdoor school 2, students battered and abused their bodies learning sports and activities such as: rockclimbing, kayaking, boardsailing, navigation, and no trace camping.

For the most part, the weather co-operated and instructors and students had a great time, and are looking forward to starting school?! That is if we can get this mess with the Administration and our profs sorted out.

Once classes get started we are going to have an extra tough year making up for lost time. However, there will be plenty of opportunities to blow off steam and stay active mentally, physically, and socially through residence events, intramural programs, and clubs. Already clubs are getting going, and there is numerous clubs to join.

I am in the midst of organizing a new boardsailing club. We have had alot of interest from students and faculty who want to have fun and enjoy the sport or learn a new sport.

Club members will have access to boards and wetsuits. Even though the water and air is cooling off quickly, we will have numerous social events organized by our vice president and chairman. We will as well be offering quality sails and boards for sale from Canadian Distributor who are willing to make special deals for members of the University Boardsailing Club.

We encourage all people who are interested in joining the club to visit our numerous meetings in the Pub Down Under and look around campus for more information.

ALPINE SKI TEAM NUKED

On Tuesday, September 19, Peter Campbell and Peter Ennis decided that the Department of Inter-University Athletics did not have enough money to support L.U.'s varsity ski-teams. After 10 years of competition in Ontario, L.U. will no longer have representatives on the University ski circuit.

However, the decision is not being taken lightly. Rena Nella, last year's co-ordinator, was shocked and offended by the decision. "One of the reasons I returned to Laurentian was to ski, and now that's been taken away from us...As for money (from the Department of Athletics) they only give us $500 a year which just covers our entry fees. We pay our own transportation, lift tickets, accommodation, meals, and entertainment. Last year we couldn't have survived without the financial and moral support of Don Punch Travel, Labatt's Breweries, and fellow students here at L.U. It's a shame that in the past the Department of Athletics has supported the team with only minimal financial support and the use of the Laurentian University name. Now we've been stripped of that too."

Bruce Campbell, another veteran of the team, stressed that the Athletics Office has wanted results to give them more funding, yet over the past few years the team has had numerous top 10 finishes as well as some outstanding team finishes considering the obstacles they face here at Laurentian. "In the past we've been forced to seek money from other sources. I guess they (Ennis and Campbell) feel that the money that has been going to the ski team is money that can be better spent elsewhere. This situation is entirely unfair and unacceptable to our 15 member ski team,

Rob Howden was a member of last year's team that traveled to Quebec to compete in the Can-Am Games. He noted that in the team's quest to seek extra money last year for travel expenses to these games, the Director of Services gave them $200 and President Daniel and Paddy Blenkinsop from Talent Development gave them $1,000. Rob and other members of the team are outraged that the cancellation of the season can be done without any real discussion. The team held a meeting on September 25 to gain student support. They are also holding a raffle to help provide funds to save the varsity ski team. The ski team urges you to help them, by talking to members of the team as well as asking the Department of Athletics to reinstate the team.

VEES SQUEAK BY RMC

The Laurentian Voyageurs soccer team extended their unbeaten record last weekend with a couple of wins over RMC in Kingston.

On Saturday the Vees dominated the Redmen 1-0, who could only manage one shot on goal. Augusto Ferreira scored the lone goal to make it his second marker in two games.

On Sunday the Vees won 2-1 in a hard fought contest. James McLaren and Nick Milanovich lead the Voyageur offense with one goal apiece. Steve Pouliot replied for the Redmen on a penalty shot. The Vees see action again next weekend when they host the Queen's Golden Gaels in a double header weekend.

FIELD HOCKEY TEAM DOWNED

The Laurentian women's field hockey team had a disappointing weekend in the Guelph exhibition tournament. The Lady Vees lost 5-0 against the York Yeomen and 2-0 to Waterloo on Saturday. Sunday was not any more promising as the Vees dropped another pair of games, 3-0 against Toronto and 1-0 against Western. Next weekend the Lady Vees start the regular season with games against McGill and Queen's.

FALL OF THE EXPOS

by Gabe Belanger

What happened to the Expos this year? Ahhh, the Cubs just beat them out. Didn't have the starting pitching eh? No. This team definitely had a good starting staff. Langston, Smith, and Martinez could've all been on the all-star team.

Well, how about their defence?

Expo defence, stabilized by Spike Owen, was air tight.

Okay, they couldn't hit right? Not really, the Expos were an average hitting team. For the homers they did not hit they stole a few bases to make up for a power shortage and overall the Expos swung the sticks pretty well.

Must have been the decimated Expo bullpen then, right? To a small extent this is true. They were without the traded Jeff Parrett but Tim Burke came off a brutal 1988 season with a strong performance. Zane Smith picked up where MacGaffigan and Hesketh stumbled so the bullpen can't be blamed.

So, what happened to the Expos, smart guy? Once again, they fell victim to the dog days of summer. How did the Cubs pull it off anyway? You got me. All I know is that the Expos could have and should have won.

Though the Expos started out like a team going nowhere, by the all-star break they were atop the division and had compiled the best first-half record in the history of the franchise. They won with the Expo brand of baseball: great pitching, tight defence, and clutch hitting. Even with Galaraga and Brooks slumping at the plate, the Expos won games with speed and contributions from the bats of Raines, Owen, and Wallach. It seemed as if the team of the eighties might come through before the decade ended. Was this the year of the Expos? Well, no.

It all started in the second week of August. The Expos started a long road trip by winning the first two games and then going on to lose seven straight. They lost close games and a few ugly ones. It was a total disaster and the team's offense was the main culprit.

From the losing streak onward, the Expos struggled in all areas but pitching. They stumbled through August but still had a shot at those amazing Cubs in September.

By the time September rolled around the Expos were still just five games out. This is where they totally fell apart. The Cubs destroyed the Expos, beating them five straight. Montreal was in each game but failed to get that clutch hit that they always had come up with through much of the season. Buck Rodgers signed his own pink slip in this series. In the most important series of the long season he made two questionable moves involving rookies. Putting faith in Marquis Grissom and Jeff Huson in clutch situations killed the Expos. Both moves went against a cardinal rule: don't put rookies in situations that they can't handle. It was too important a series to do what Rodgers did. But this still isn't where the Expos lost it. They lost it in the dog days of summer.

In conclusion, I'd like to point out to all those die-hard Montreal sports fans- we've still got the Habs.

NFL Picks

by Mike Stevenson

The fourth week of the schedule kicks off with only five undefeated teams left in the league.

Atlanta(1-2) at Green Bay(1-2)

The Packers scored 38 points in a loss to the Rams and held the 49ers to 20 points in their two losses this season.

Green Bay by 4

Cincinnati(2-1) at Kansas City(1-2)

Despite the loss of Ickey Woods, the Bengals have more than enough talent to overcome the Chiefs.

Cincy by 5

Denver(3-0) at Cleveland(2-1)

Denver's defense is due for a letdown while the Cleveland defense leads the league.

Cleveland by 3

Indianapolis(1-2) at N.Y. Jets(1-2)

Chris Chandler is out of the lineup and Eric Dickerson is a possible scratch, which should give the Jet defense a break.

Jets by 5

Miami(1-2) at Houston(1-2)

Houston is facing a must win situation in order to get back into the AFC Central race and the weak Dolphin defense will provide little opposition.

Houston by 6

New England(1-2) at Buffalo(2-1)

The Pat defense is brutal and Buffalo is coming off a 47 point performance in Houston.

Buffalo by 8

Washington(1-2) at New Orleans(1-2)

The Saints have been pathetic since their opening day victory over Dallas and the trend will continue against the Redskins.

Washington by 5

Pittsburgh(1-2) at Detroit(0-3)

How can a team that gives up 92 points in two games beat the Vikings 27-14? How can a team like Detroit score 27 points against the Bears? Does anybody really care?

Detroit by 2

Tampa Bay(2-1) at Minnesota(1-2)

The way Minny is playing, a good high school team might beat them. The Bay's defense has been exceptional.

Tampa Bay by 3

San Diego(1-2) at Phoenix(2-1)

Phoenix cannot possibly play as poorly as it did last week. Then again, anything is possible with Gary Hogeboom.

Phoenix by 3

Seattle(1-2) at L.A. Raiders(1-2)

Seattle finally got their running game untracked while the Raiders still haven't solved their quarterback problem.

Seattle by 3

N.Y. Giants(3-0) at Dallas(0-3)

The mismatch of the week. Phil Simms is playing the best ball of his career while Troy Aikman is playing like the rookie that he is.

Giants by 7

L.A. Rams(3-0) at San Francisco(3-0)

The 49ers miracle comeback against the Eagles should carry them over against the Rams, who narrowly defeated Green Bay.

49ers by 5

Philadelphia(2-1) at Chicago(3-0)-Monday

Although Chicago is due for a loss the fact they are undefeated and at Soldier Field should carry them over the Eagles.

:"AT 33% OFF,
IT'S A MYSTERY
TO ME
IF YOU
DON'T TAKE THE TRAIN."
— AGATHA CHRISTIE

Nearly half a million students can't be wrong.

While I was never one to simply go along with the crowd, I certainly side with the nearly half a million students in Canada who took the train last year to visit family and friends or take a well-deserved break away from it all.

Where else but on the train can you get up and walk around, enjoy a stunning view, a complimentary meal on many routes, rest, catch up on your studies, travel with a group of friends, meet new people along the way and, in many cases, have the superb convenience of downtown-to-downtown service too? I honestly haven't a clue where else but on the train.

And with students getting to travel at 33% off the regular fare simply by showing their student cards*, the real mystery to me would be not taking the train every time you take a trip. Even the redoubtable Hercule Poirot would be stumped there.

*Student discount not applicable on Fridays and Sundays between 12 noon and 6:00 p.m. on intercity trips anywhere between Québec City and Windsor or anywhere between Halifax and Fredericton (trains 11 and 12) or between Moncton and Campbellton (train 15 only) except when travelling to a destination outside these routes. Student discount is not applicable at anytime on any route between December 15th, 1989 and January 3rd, 1990 or between June 1st and September 30th, 1989 when sleeping car accommodation is purchased except on the Atlantic, The Ocean and The Chaleur.
